HOLD ON TO YOUR DREAM

There is a voice that calls to some of us,
From somewhere deep inside.
A voice that will not give us peace,
Until at least we've tried,
To catch that bright exclusive star,
Though foolish it may seem
To those not driven as we are
To hold on to a dream,
And then that voice inside of us
That others cannot know
Tells us that our chance will come,
That we must not let go.
If we can only persevere
Someday our star will gleam
And they'll know why we had to try
To hold on to our dream.

Memories...

Memories in my life fade away
As I replace them with others.
They are forgotten and stored away.

Although the memories are pushed to the side, They are safe so I may remember them in the future.

Our mind is like a book;
It writes down important things and keeps them Between the pages forever.

Maybe our whole album of memories:
Our first step, first experience, first grief, and the others

Were meant to be there for us to never forget. So that, with each passing day we can add on to
These memories..

A WOMEN'S SMILE... HER POWER..

I am a lady,
With all high dreams....
But due to underestimation,
My heart screams...
Why limits to my progress?
Men always ready to suppress...
I know my rights and duties,
The duty of service and
The rights of liberties...

How strange is this,
Male dominated environment?
In the name of social service,
Is done my empowerment...
Do women really need?
An external support or any social deed...
And put down in the name of,
'sati, dowry ,caste ,and creed'...

But after a limit a lady says,
Myself –confidence within me lays...
Gentlemen! no need of your hands,
To pull me down, or lit my lifes lamps...
I only need your support,
So that in the sea of equality,
Will humanity float...

WORRY IS A DISTANT HILL

Worry is like Distant will
Will glimpse against the sky
We wonder how we ever will
Get up a hill so high
Yet when we reach the top we see
The roadway left behind
Is not as sleep & sheer as we Have pictured in our mind.
